The award-winning TV series "Last of the Summer Wine" has consistently topped the rating charts ever since its first appearance on our screens 17 years ago, and now summer wine country evokes in words and photographs the beautiful country which has become as familiar to us as the characters themselves. Roy Clarke, writer of the series, uses entries from Clegg's wry journal to provide a commentary on the stunning photographs by fellow Yorkshireman, Paul Barker - which sympathetically reflect the changing moods of Holmfirth and its surrounding countryside.
