Traffic Analysis: New Technology and New Solutions M.A.P. Taylor, Professor William Young

The present state of technology for traffic data collection, analysis and interpretation is described in this book, which shows how an agency or individual with an interest in road traffic systems can establish or acquire low cost yet powerful systems. No specialist knowledge is assumed. A list of references enabling the subject to be pursued in greater detail is given and information is offered on traffic-related microcomputer software. The book should be of interest to traffic engineers, planners and other professional groups interested in road traffic systems.
